help us build the story of home

Patricia Bradley was content to live the rest of her life as a renter. After retiring from the State of Delaware, Patricia needed change. She wanted to live closer to her daughter and grandchildren, who resided in Texas. That Thanksgiving, her daughter, with her grandchildren, came to visit for the holiday. They all had a vision of living closer together. Rather than going back to Texas, Patricia decided to forego renting, and moved into a 1975 mobile home to host herself and up to 13 other family members at any given time, including her daughter and grandchildren and two children Patricia gained custody of while helping a friend in a bad situation.

Living in Lakeland Mobile Home park in Dover, Delaware was not sustainable for Patricia or her loved ones. After two years of living there, with rampant violence around them and deterioration of the mobile home, Patricia sought God's love to be put into action. She reached out to Central Delaware Habitat for Humanity in February of 2018 where she got approval to become a homeowner in April of 2018.

Through her journey towards affordable homeownership, Patricia and her niece, Natalia – who Patricia raised since birth, each committed to completing 250 hours of sweat equity, building their new home, assisting the CDHFH office staff and volunteering in the ReStore. After hard work and dedication, Patricia officially moved into her new home in February of 2020.

Today, both Patricia and Natalia's journey has come full circle. They both work for the CDHFH ReStore assisting customers with purchases and telling their story to encourage potential future homeowners. Natalia is thankful for a safe forever home. Patricia upholds that "Habitat is family. The people here are why we stay around. When you work with the right people, you do feel the love of God, just like the love of family."

Patricia Bradley's story is one of sacrifice, faith, and love. Central Delaware Habitat for Humanity continues to empower families and individuals through partnership housing by giving a hand-up, not a hand-out. We encourage you and your organization to sponsor Central Delaware Habitat throughout 2023. Due to drastic increases in acquisition and construction costs, CDHFH is struggling with the unusually high demands for our programs. With your support, we can continue to change the lives of families in Kent County, like the Bradley's. We believe every ONE deserves a decent place to call home. Together, we can build more homes, communities, and hope for local families. Thank you for your time and consideration
